"I'm Exhausted - Research on complicated encounters and measuring mental fatigue" (webinar)

Healthcare interpreters' work can be mentally taxing. However, we are often uncertain as to what contributes to our mental fatigue, outside of the obvious issue of long encounters and long workdays. Unfortunately, interpreter fatigue is not well documented. This presentation provides information on various factors that can affect both concentration and performance contributing to mental fatigue. It also sheds light on precedents in other industries that make the case for use of a measurement tool to address such factors and mental fatigue in a more sophisticated way.
